WASHINGTON NOTES.

The will of the late General Sheridan was admitted to probate at Washington Monday. It leaves one-third of all his personal property to his wife, the same in lieu of dower. The rest is left to his wife, M. V. Sheridan, and Linden Kent in trust. As each of the children reaches the age of 21 years, the trustees are to give to such child its share of the estate. The personal estate consists of property valued at $19,821, with an indebtedness of about $1,257.

Large crowds thronged St. Matthew's Church, Washington, Friday, to view the catafalque in which rested the remains of General Sheridan, but none were permitted to look upon his face and the casket was only opened for the family. 50th CONGRESS.

SENATE.—Mr. Stewart moved that the regular business (bills on the calendar) be laid aside and the Chinese Prohibition bill be taken up. Agreed to—yeas, 40; nays, 3 (Senators Berry, Coke and Jones, of Arkansas). The bill was then passed without a division. The bill provides that from and after the date of the exchange of ratification of the pending treaty between the United States of America and His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of China, signed on the 12th day of March, 1888, it shall be unlawful for any Chinese person, whether a subject of China or of any other power, to enter the United States except as in this bill provided. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the fisheries treaty in open executive session, and was addressed by Mr. Evarts in opposition.

After the introduction of a few unimportant resolutions the House began the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia. Mr. Buchanan, of New Jersey, offered a resolution directing the Committee on Printing to investigate the truth of the allegation of a New York paper that the public printer is buying felt for printing in England. Referred. Mr. Dubois, of Idaho, offered a resolution calling on the Attorney General for a list of pardons granted by the President to persons convicted of the charge of unlawful cohabitation in Utah and Idaho since March 4th, 1885. Referred. Mr. Davidson, of Florida, introduced a joint resolution appropriating $200,000 to aid in suppressing infectious diseases in the United States. Referred. The floor was then accorded to the Committee on the District of Columbia. The first bill called up, authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to condemn property on Rock Creek for park purposes, gave rise to a protracted discussion. Mr. Stockdale, of Mississippi, was the principal opponent of the measure, and he argued that the government had no right to condemn private property for public amusement. He incidentally alluded to the proposed zoological park and ridiculed the idea of the government going into the menagerie business. Mr. Atkinson, of Pennsylvania, suggested there was nothing inappropriate in the government going into the menagerie business after it had sunk $1,000,000 in the show business at New Orleans. Mr. Stockdale replied that the "show business" at New Orleans was an exposition, to show the world how the United States had progressed in industries and art. Mr. Atkinson said that the purpose of a zoological park was to educate the people in regard to habits of the animals confined there; and remarked that the government was already in possession of two buffaloes. The educating powers of two buffaloes were sarcastically commented upon by Mr. Stockdale who referred to the pleasure which his constituents would have when they traveled from Mississippi to Washington for the purpose of seeing the two buffaloes. The bill was finally recommitted. On motion of Mr. Mattson, the senate bill was passed increasing to $30 a month the rate of pension for total deafness. Mr. Warner, of Missouri, asked unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the dependent pension bill, but Mr. Walker, of Missouri, objected. The House then went into committee of the whole on the fortification appropriation bill. No time was consumed in general debate, and the committee immediately proceeded to the consideration of the bill by sections.

A $17,000 MAIL ROBBERY.

It Takes Place in Missouri, and the State Loses $5,000.

It has just been learned that a bold mail robbery was committed on the Missouri Pacific road between Jefferson City and St. Louis Aug. 4, in which over $17,000 was stolen, of which $5,000 was from the state treasury. The discovery of the crime was accidental. Two farmers near Washington, Mo., were approaching a suspicious-looking man on the highway when he became frightened, and in attempting to flee dropped a large package. The farmers secured it and at once discovered that it was plunder from a mail robbery. They turned it over to the postmaster, who notified the postal authorities, and a secret service agent from St. Louis arrived to hunt up the robbers.

DOWN AN EMBANKMENT.

Awful Railroad Accident Near Morgantown, Ind.—Many Hurt, Ten Fatally.

A bad accident occurred at 7:30 o'clock Thursday morning near the little village of Morgantown, on the Fairland & Franklin railroad, seventeen miles northwest of Columbus. The train was the usual accommodation, with several freight cars and a baggage and passenger car behind. About thirty-five passengers were aboard, among them being several delegates to the state convention from Brown and Morgan counties. When two miles from Morgantown, while crossing a trestle, a fearful shock was felt by the passengers, and before they were well aware of what had happened the car with its human freight was turned over down a forty-four-foot embankment. The scene of the wildest confusion ensued. The screams of the wounded were terrible to hear. Many were pinioned to the floor with heavy timbers. The uninjured passengers at once began the work of rescuing their unfortunate companions, word was sent to Morgantown and a number of doctors brought to the spot.

Of the above number at least ten can not possibly live. All but two of the passengers on board received some injury. The accident was caused by a rail breaking.

CARRIED ACROSS THE OCEAN.

Strange Story of Kidnapping Told by a Young Man of Racine, Wis.

Solomon Richardson, of Racine, Wis., has just received a letter from his 19-year-old son, Fred, postmarked at Plymouth, England, which relates a remarkable experience. Last summer Fred dissapeared from home to go to Portland, Oregon. Although he was not heard from after he reached his destination and lived there until several months ago, when, while walking near the river in Portland, he was seized from behind and placed on board a vessel, which set sail for England that night. He was then subjected to the most brutal treatment and was nearly starved. In due time the vessel arrived at Plymouth, but he was not liberated, and it was only after waiting for a considerable time that an opportunity offered itself for him to mail a letter containing the facts. The cause of his being kidnapped can not be imagined. Mr. Richardson has placed the matter in the hands of his attorneys here, who will endeavor to have the boy released immediately.

A PLAGUE UPON HIS HOUSE.

Fatality Attendant Upon the Sickness of a Family in Ohio.

A telegram from Bucyrus, O., bearing date Aug. 10, says: In Lyngs Township, north of here, a plague appears to have visited the home of Philip Zeltner. His wife has been sick for some time, and his son George and his wife, who went home to nurse the mother, are both sick, as are two others. Lucy Rhodes, a neighboring girl, visited the house to nurse the party. Saturday morning she arose as usual, was taken suddenly ill, and by noon was dead. Barbara Plotner, who went as a nurse, was taken suddenly ill and died yesterday. Mrs. Mills and a young girl, two other nurses, were both taken suddenly ill yesterday. The physicians insist there is no contagious disease, but the neighbors are much frightened. Many are afraid to go near the house.

TRAIN WRECKERS' DIABOLISM

A Texas Express Derailed—The Engineer Killed and Others Injured.

A fiendish crime was committed at an early hour Thursday morning by train wreckers six miles from Waco, Tex., on the Texas Central Road. Pieces of timber were fastened to the track and the night express was derailed, the locomotive demolished, and several cars badly damaged. Engineer J. R. Moses was killed outright, his fireman terribly scalded, and a half-dozen passengers injured. A sheriff's posse is scouring the country for the criminals and the railroad company offers $1,000 reward each for their capture.

Bees in California.

It frequently occurs in Southern California that a swarm of bees take possession of a house and fill the space between the lathing and rustic with wild honey, resisting all mild attempts to drive them out. The following is from the Tustin City correspondent of the Santa Ana Blade: "Sam Tustin has been having a war with bees. A half-dozen swarm had taken possession of his store building, occupied by J. W. Ballard, and threatened to hold it to the exclusion of its owners. And as the bees were very enthusiastic in their business it looked as though they might stay, even though Sam had the first claim. Tustin, with an able assistant, first clothed themselves in musquito-cloth and heavy gloves, and armed with an assortment of carpenter tools to tear off the rustic, etc., then, by the liberal use of brimstone and fire made it warm for the pests. About two days finished one "houseful" and the boys had so much fight left in them, or wanted revenge, that they attacked a large colony in possession of the Presbyterian church, won the fight, and confiscated several barrels of honey."—San Fancisco Chronicle.

The Value of the Queen's Opinion.

I see it stated that the Queen has during her visit to Berlin, assured Prince Bismarck that he may count on us, and that there is no possibility of Mr. Gladstone ever returning to power. If this may be true the Prince, who knows England, must have smiled. Here the monarch reigns, but does not govern. The people decide whether they will go to war and against whom, and the people decide who is to be Prime Minister. Whether Mr. Gladstone will ever be Prime Minister is a matter upon which opinions are divergent, but I should imagine that there is no one whose opinion upon this subject is worth less than that of of her Majesty.—London Truth.

Furthermore, the English city has no deaths from sunstroke to record, and a temperature below zero is almost unknown.

The I. O. U.'s standing on Delmonico's books are known to amount to $300,000. It is a collection of years. The singular feature is that the Delmonicos never resort to lawsuits to recover from the delinquents. It is their boast that no suits have ever been entered in their name. Still another phenomena is that Charles Delmonico generally dines at the hostelries of his neighbors or patronizes the chop houses of Captain Reilly's "Tenderloin" precinct.

It was one of our Boston schools, and the question was arithmetical, something like this: "If 17 men can do a piece of work in one week, how many men would it require to do it in three weeks?" Up went a hand. "Well," said the teacher. "Five men and a boy 14 years old." "How do you make that out?" asked the teacher endeavoring to suppress a smile. "It would take one-third as many men. One-third of 17 is five and two-thirds." "But where does the boy come in?" "A person is not a man until he is 21. Two-thirds of 21 is 14. It would take, therefore, 5 men and a 14-year-old boy."

"THE EDITOR."

Don't Like to be Painted.

The Apache Indian has a decided objection to posing as an artist's model. He does not understand the process, and thinks it to be some sort of "medicine" work, the more avoided the better.

A young gentleman of this city, says the Mobile Register, an artist by profession, went up to Mount Vernon recently to see what he could see. He was delighted to find that the Indian prisoners there present subjects rich in barbaric contrasts of form and color; they pose in a savage kind of way, and altogether make pictures which an artist would be glad to reproduce on canvas. But they strongly object to sitting for portraits; in fact, whenever the artist came near their tents they quickly and silently disappeared. Dozens of them might be in sight, but at once they would vanish, going into the tents or fleeing to the bushes for cover. For a couple of days the hunt for subjects was always baffled in this way. The Indians did not, however, have so great an objection to being photographed, and the artist secured pictures of all of their chief men.

He tells of one curious incident in connection with his attempts to secure a painting of some of the savages:

"Coming across a very striking group of Indians, seated in a tent playing cards, I got out my colors and proceeded to paint the picture. There they were squatted on the ground inside the tent, the flaring doorway held back by a long pole, their brilliant red and blue blankets on their shoulders or on the ground, their faces all coppery and swarth—they were just what I had been trying to find for my canvas.

"Well, as soon as I got to work they got up and left the tent. This was a decided hint, so I packed up my things and moved also. When they saw I had gone, they returned and resumed their game. I returned also, and resumed my work. Seeing that I did not intend to be done out of my picture, one of the men got up and fastened a blanket over the entrance. Then they continued their card playing.

"I had not finished working on the tent and the green foliage which surrounded it, so I kept my place, while a number of Indians gathered around and watched my operations. When I completed all I wanted of the tent, and concluded I did not care to finish it up with a blanket over its doorway, the idea struck me that I could sketch in the Indians from my recollection of how they were posed inside the tent, so I went to work and outlined the group.

"I was startled by a loud exclamation uttered above. 'Ugh!' 'Hi!' 'Wolla walla!' 'Ughugh!' and so on, the Indians being very greatly surprised that I could paint the people I could not see. Some of those who had been looking over my shoulder speeded into the tent to tell the card players that it was no use to try to keep that pale-face-not-afraid-of-the-dye-sticks out, as he could very plainly see right through a blanket. Then one of the players crept from underneath the back of the tent and making a wide circuit, came around behind me to satisfy himself that this report was true. He uttered a loud 'Hy-yoh!' and went off to report. With this the card players all crawled from under the tent and took to the woods. They were determined I should not paint them. I, having sufficient of outline work closed proceedings and returned to my lodgings."

Thumb rings are being worn by some ladies, but, as it takes a pretty hand and a very slender one to make one look well, it is doubtful whether they will be popular. It gives one the idea of a person with the right hand glove on the left hand.

MAXWELL IS HUNG.

The Murderer of C. Arthur Preller Dies on the Scaffold in St. Louis in Fearful Agony.

His Neck Broken by the Fatal Drop —His Innocence Proclaimed and American Law Denounced.

Hugh M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, the murderer of C. Arthur Preller, was hanged in the St. Louis jail Friday morning, together with Murderer Landgraf. The drop fell at exactly 9:02.

At 5 o'clock Maxwell was dressed for his last day on earth. He wore a black Prince Albert coat and white tie, which set off his pale face. He was beginning to show a little nervousness. He glanced about with something of a glare in his eyes that reminded one of the wild, frightened look he had as he was received by a crowd of several hundred people at the Union depot about sunrise one morning three years ago. He looked then as if he were afraid the crowd might prove to be a mob, and the same glisten was in his eyes as he stared about after donning his burial suit Friday morning.

At 6:10, just as everything was ready for the final march to the scaffold, the sheriff gave in to an appeal of Maxwell's attorney's for a postponement of the execution for two hours, and announced that it would not take place until 8:30 a. m. All holders of tickets were notified to return by that time.

The condemned men were taken back to Landgraf's cell, where they spent the time in private with Father Tyrrhn, no one else except the guards being present.

At 8:20 a message was received from Mr. Fauntleroy, Maxwell's attorney at Jefferson City, saying there was no hope for Maxwell. At 8:45 the sheriff entered the jail and the prisoners were brought out from the cells they had occupied so long. The crowd gathered about, the death warrants were read, and the arms of the men tied behind and their hands tied in front. The march to the scaffold was commenced. Maxwell was deathly pale, and Landgraf about as usual.

Everything worked smoothly, from the bringing of the prisoners from their cells to the springing of the trap, the whole occupying scarcely fifteen minutes. The reading of the death-warrants occupied but a few minutes, and the march to the scaffold but a few more, the procession passing between a double file of police. Maxwell was very pale, and kept his eyes on the ground as he walked, but his step was steady and firm, and no tremor was perceptible in his arms. Landgraf walked with his wonted stolid indifference, and neither spoke a word. They had hardly ascended the scaffold before the black caps were over their heads shutting out their faces, and an instant later both shot down through the death trap.

Maxwell's body twitched and jerked for over twelve minutes, and from a cut on the face, caused by the rope in being drawn over the head, a stream of blood trickled down and dropped to the floor. His body was cut down at 9:18 and removed to the morgue, where it was photographed. Landgraf's body was also taken to the dead-house, where a picture was obtained. The necks of both men were broken.

Morgue officials state that Maxwell's body was the filthiest corpse handled in the morgue for many a day. His underclothing was vile and he evidently had not bathed in months. After the post-mortem the remains of Maxwell were taken to an undertaking establishment and embalmed. The casket was quietly conveyed to Cavalry cemetery and placed in a vault for interment at a later day. Mrs. Brooks and daughter, mother and sister of the deceased, and John I. Martin, Maxwell's attorney, accompanied the remains to the cemetery. It was expected there would be a scene at the morgue after the execution, but the mother and sister wisely remained away.

Friday Maxwell furnished a document which he called his dying statement. In it he reasserts his innocence of the willful killing of Charles Arthur Preller and then gives an epitome of the statement of the case as heretofore published, beginning with the acquaintance formed in Liverpool with Preller, detailing the death of Preller, his own terror and flight, the pursuit, capture, trial, conviction, closing with bitter denunciation of those who he asserts have been instrumental in dragging him out of the highways of justice into the by paths of mob law and making his execution an infamy and a disgrace to the United States.

MAXWELL'S SHOCKING CRIME.

History of the Case That Brought the Young Englishman to the Gallows.

The crime for which Hugo M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, paid the extreme penalty of the law was the murder of his friend, Charles Arthur Preller, in room 144 of the Southern hotel, Sunday, April 6, 1885. The acquaintance between Maxwell, as he is best known, and Preller was formed in Liverpool, England.

Early in 1885 Maxwell had left his home in Hyde, near Manchester, against the wishes of his parents, his objective point being America. From Manchester he went to Liverpool. He had no funds to speak of, but relied upon a smattering of science, law, and general information and a large amount of assurance to win his way across the sea. At the Northwestern hotel in Liverpool he met Preller, and in a casual conversation each man learned that the other would sail in the Cunard steamer Cephalonia for America. Later they met on board and soon became fast friends.

They came to St. Louis, and Sunday, April 6, Preller was killed with chloroform by Maxwell. A few days later the body was found in a trunk, but Maxwell had fled. Officers traced him to Auckland, New Zealand, where he was arrested. He was returned, and locked up in St. Louis. The motive for the crime was shown in Maxwell having taken Preller's money, over $800, and a lot of his wearing apparel and personal effects; but the clinching testimony was that of John F. McCullough, a detective who, under the name of Frank Dingfelder, had been imprisoned with Maxwell as a forger, and from him secured a confession of the crime.

Maxwell's defense was that the death of *Preller was accidental. He said he had ad*ministered the chloroform to operate on Preller for stricture. He fled because he presumed he would not be permitted to testify in his own behalf, that being the law in England. He was found guilty of murder and sentenced to be hanged. A new trial was sought on the ground that a juror had expressed himself in favor of conviction before the trial. The motion was denied. An appeal to the supreme court resulted in affirmation of the lower court's judgment, though the detective episode was censured and one of the judges (Sherwood) dissented. Application was then made to Justice Miller of the United States supreme court for a new trial on error, which was granted, and the execution, which had been set for Aug. 20, 1887, indefinitely staid. Later the matter was dismissed by the supreme bench, holding there was nothing to show that Maxwell had not had a fair trial. Maxwell's attorneys then sought executive clemency, which was refused Thursday.

LANDGRAF'S CRIME.

Insanely Jealous, He Deliberately Killed the Girl He Professed to Love.

The crime for which Henry Landgraf suffered the death penalty was committed on the night of March 5, 1885. The victim was his sweetheart, Annie Tisch, a beautiful girl of less than 18 years old. Jealousy prompted the deed. On the day of the murder he took the girl out walking, having the revolver with which he killed her in his pocket. He suddenly turned and upbraided her for keeping company with other men. She merely laughed, when he shot her through the head. He was convicted and sentenced to be hanged April 29, 1887. An appeal was granted the same day. May 7, 1887, the Supreme Court affirmed the decision and the date of execution was fixed for June 23. The governor granted a respite until July 13, and on the 12th day of July Judge Norville granted him another stay until August 10th.

CHATTANOOGA'S BIG BLAZE.

The Finest Block in the City Destroyed With a Terrible Loss of Life.

The loss by Thursday night's fire at Chattanooga, Tenn., in property and life was very great. Ten persons are thought to have lost their lives in the flames, and the bodies of six have been recovered. The names of those identified are: Thomas Smith, of Atlanta, Ga.; James P. McMillan, David Welch, George Robinson, Will Krur. The bodies of several others are known to be beneath the ruins, but they cannot be recovered until the mass of brick beneath which they are buried cools off. Four persons were badly hurt.

The loss is estimated at $340,000, which is more than half covered by insurance. It seems that there was criminal carelessness in erecting the masonry around the factories because they collapsed solely from the heat. One building fell in when fifty persons were inside. The following business houses were burned: Shelton, Howard & Co., wholesale saddlery; Phelps & Long, clothiers; Rosenny, Crutchfield & Co., wholesale dry goods; the M. Block Drug company, wholesale drugs; the Gibson Lee Manufacturing company, wholesale queensware; Deltzer Bros., wholesale fruits and vegetables; Rosenbaum & Co., clothiers; the Bradt Printing company, the Chattanooga paper-box factory, Rosenheim Sons, wholesale liquors; A. Schepin, confectionery, and Joe Simpson, clothing. The above properly comprised the finest business block in the city, and it will be a week before the exact number killed can be determined.

BLAINE'S RECEPTION.

His Friends Turn Out En Masse and Cheer Themselves Hoarse.

About 8 o'clock Friday morning the Starin met the City of New York outside the Narrows. The Starin turned about and both vessels slowly steamed up the bay, bow and bow. Cheer after cheer rose from the decks of the Starin, although it was yet impossible to distinguish Mr. Blaine's form among the 2,000 that stood on the decks of the huge steamer. As the vessels neared each other Mr. Blaine's form was made out, standing in a group of friends on the upper deck forward. As cheer after cheer arose, Mr. Blaine bowed repeatedly. He was nattily dressed in a dark cutaway coat, light trousers, and brown derby hat. The Chicago Blaine Club's little tug had been the first to greet the steamer as it came up the bay, and clung under its wing, while the Chicago men cheered. Cappa's band on the Starin played "Home Again," and "Home, Sweet Home," and the "Star Spangled Banner" while advancing up to quarantine. Then both vessels came to anchor, and as the Starin ran over under the side of the City of New York, Mr. Blaine's face and form were plainly visible to everyone on board. Cheer after cheer broke forth, handkerchiefs and flags were raised, cries of Blaine, James G. Blaine," "No free trade," arose, and the utmost enthusiasm prevailed. At last, at 9:15 o'clock, to the music of "Hail to the Chief," Mr. Blaine got on board the Starin, escorted by Whitelaw Reid and Mr. Pool. Mr. Bartlett delivered the welcome speech, and Mr. Blaine made an extended reply, dwelling at some length upon the issues of the present campaign.

As many people as could be packed in the space between the reviewing-stand, near the Worth monument, and Madison square, opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel, gathered together Friday evening to catch a glimpse of James G. Blaine. They were for the most part members of various trades and labor organizations of New York City and its vicinity assembled to welcome the Republican statesman home. Grand as was the display of marching columns, and shouting thousands, and banners flowing and fireworks light as they passed the reviewing-stand on Thursday night, it was nothing to compare to the demonstration of labor hosts Friday evening. The rapt attention with which his words were listened to by his admirers in the immense throng who were near enough to catch their import, and the applause that began with a ripple at the center and swelled into a wave of enthusiasm as it was taken up by the great gathering, told that a master hand was playing upon the chords of sympathy that put him, so to speak, in telephonic communication with every Republican heart. "It was the recognition by earnest men," says a Republican journal, "not seeking political preferment, but anxious only to do the best they could for the support of their family and to maintain the position that honest labor desires to occupy, of the fact that a statesman stood before them who had studied their wants and understood them."

SHERIDAN'S FUNERAL.

The Brave Cavalry Leader Laid to His Final Rest.

A few minutes before 8 Friday morning Mrs. Sheridan, accompanied by General and Mrs. Rucker, her father and mother, Colonel Sheridan, and other members of the family, entered St. Matthew's Church, at Washington, where the remains of the dead general lay in state. At 6 o'clock a special requiem mass was celebrated by Father Kervick. At the conclusion of the service the church was cleared and Mrs. Sheridan remained alone with her dead. As she left the church the guard resumed their places and visitors were again admitted. A steady stream of people poured in and out of the church all day.

In accordance with the wish of Mrs. Sheridan the simple effect of the casket covered only with the American flag was not broken by placing floral tributes upon it. Such flowers as were received were placed on the step inside the altar rail. A wreath of ivy leaves with palm branches arrived at the church this morning from some unknown source. It was thought to have been sent by the President. The church remained open as usual until 8 o'clock Saturday morning, the usual parochial mass being celebrated at 7.

It was the wish of Mrs. Sheridan that the public should not look upon the great General dead. Some of those about the casket think that the family wish not only to keep his remains sacred to his own family, but that they prefer also that the public shall remember him only as he was in life. The people of Washington, therefore, will remember him only as they saw him last in health, save the few who witnessed the removal, and caught a glimpse of the wan face and emaciated hand as it hung limp and almost lifeless at his side when he was borne upon the stretcher to be taken to the Swatora for his last voyage.

The following Chicago persons arrived Friday night to attend the funeral: General W. E. Strong, A. C. Ducat, J. McGregor Adams, H. W. Jackson, representing the Loyal Legion (who have forwarded a floral epaulette four feet high, to be placed by the remains of the General of the army), John B. Carson, A. S. Gage, Henry Wheeler, N. K. Fairbank and Marshall Field.

After early mass Saturday morning the church was closed for a time and when it was re-opened, those provided with tickets began to arrive. Those who had the invitations came early. The ceremony was to be conducted with military precision. The bell began to toll, the troops were drawn up in line, and a few minutes afterward the family arrived. As soon as they had entered, the soldiers who were to form the escort marched into the empty space in front of the church and formed a brilliant, glittering line. The cavalry much resembled the German cuirassiers, with the picked steeds to which General Sheridan brought back with him and adopted for our army after his visit to Sedan. But there were two features in the center of that guard of escort which attracted attention. The plain artillery caisson upon which the remains of the great soldier were to rest looked almost repulsive in its rough simplicity. It was covered with flags and some black drapping, but so that the rough parts of the caisson did not appear. It was drawn by four horses in the usual army harness. Behind it stood "Guy," the beautiful horse which was the favorite of General Sheridan. It was a well-bred animal, and was native at the long walk. It was saddled and bridled, as it for its owner's mount, the gold-embroidered cloth bearing the insignia of his rank as General. Attached to the stirrups were the General's military boots, reversed, the spurs pointing to the front in accordance with the ancient military custom. This horse was bought for General Sheridan four years ago, when in Chicago, and was brought from Kentucky. It has not been used much by its owner in Washington. All of the old war horses are dead. The riderless horse was led to the grave of its master by Sergeant Major Perrine, of the Sixth Cavalry.

Gen. Sheridan died as he lived—a soldier. No funeral services were ever conducted with more perfect precision. They were like clockwork, and not a jar occurred to mar the beauty and impressiveness of the occasion. Cardinal Gibbon's address, which embraced a sketch of the dead chieftain drawn from personal relations with him, was pronounced remarkable in very many respects. The fearless manner in which the cardinal indorsed not only the means but the ends of the general in his ride through the Shenandoah created some surprise. He declared that the general was never unnecessarily harsh with his foe and that he always employed the mildest means to attain his victory. The services occupied over an hour and a half. A more distinguished body of men never assembled to pay tribute to the memory of any man. Besides the President, his cabinet, Gen. Sherman, the leading men in both houses of congress, and the justices of the Supreme court, there were a large number of well-known men from various parts of the country. Considerable feeling was created in Grand Army of the Republic circles by the refusal of Cardinal Gibbons to celebrate mass if the members of a secret society were permitted to attend the services in the capacity of their order.

DROVE HIS HEAD INTO A MULE

Singular Accident Which Befell a Boy in a Pennsylvania Mine.

Joseph Richards, 14 years old, was driving a mule in the Murray Shaft, near Wilkesbarre, Pa. A train of five loaded cars ran away and struck the boy with such force that his head was driven entirely into the mule's abdomen. His shoulder was broken and he was otherwise injured. When the horrified miners discovered the boy's condition they endeavored to extricate him and found the united strength of two men necessary. The boy's head penetrated the stomach of the mule. The boy was taken home for dead, but revived somewhat, though his skull is fractured and he will probably die. The mule died almost immediately after the accident.

Guard mount at 9 o'clock on Thursday, and sick call at noon instead of the usual time.

No liquor will be sold here during the encampment, and you may look out for a splendid time.

Let everybody report to the committee how many they can accommodate, and let us give the boys a royal welcome.

On Wednesday evening Comrade Garland will tell the Esel story promptly at taps, and extra duty for all who fail to attend.

Everybody is invited to call at the butter factory during the re-union, and the Nevelle Bros. will show you how to make the best butter.

The following ladies were appointed a committee on the picnic dinner, and we all know the names mean success: Mrs. R. D. Parker, Mrs. J. I. Morrell, Mrs. O. P. Barron, Mrs. Phelps, Mrs. Dr. Rickey, Mrs. Lon Fenlon, Mrs. A. Owen, Mrs. E. Hendee, Mrs. George Palmer, Mrs. H. Hendee.

The people here are endeavoring to make the re-union to be held here next week one of the events to be remembered by all who may attend. The ladies have concluded to give the veterans a free picnic dinner, and the committee who have the arrangements in charge are doing all that can be done to make it pleasant and a success, and they hope that religious and political questions may be discussed at home and not on this occasion. There will be tents for all who may want to stop in the camp, and there will be firewood so the boys can tell the old stories by the light of the camp-fire, as they did years ago. And we want all the old soldiers to attend, and we will give them a welcome, and hope to have such a time as they will never forget. We are going to have a field piece that did service in the war. We expect to have John C. Black to speak for us on Thursday, and the Antioch band will be here in full force. The committee on music have a good programme, and the Wisconsin railroad will give round trip tickets at one and one-third fare, the tickets good for the 22d and 23d, and all tickets will be signed on the grounds by R. D. Parker, which will insure all who buy tickets for those dates to the reduction from regular fares. There will be served on the grounds meals for all who wish to secure them. Soldiers will be charged 25 cents.

HAINESVILLE.

Mr. Gould was out this week.

It's nice weather we are having.

No, they don't go fishing any more.

Keep at boys, if you want to get in trouble.

Most of the farmers have their grain stacked.

"Shorty" did not go to "Gage's," but Frank did.

Melons are cheap. Don't have to visit a patch.

The "Chicagos" are looking for 'Shorty" and Fred.

Cigarettes are more damaging to the system than cigars.

Wonder if "Shorty" was with the gang? We presume not.

Wonder if Jim has been trying to sell the "Mugwump" boat.

It is a nice thing to be smart, but it is not very nice to know it.

Little Robbie Washburn has been quite sick for the past few days.

Another match for the "Champion ship" of Hainesville.—Who won?

There is to be a dance here the 23d. You want to get ready for a big time.

I would get some other word besides "Hats." Nobody but "Chinaman" use it.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Parker of Hyde Park are spending a few days with friends.

We have a nice set of boys, highly respectable.—We can tell from their actions.

Keep your eye on Geo. Battershall. A town like Gray's Lake don't hurt his trade.

There was a meeting of all the oldest soldiers in town Saturday night, but they could not "fire" very straight.

It is hard to keep track of the "Commercial Club." Maybe it has been moved from Uncle Simon's barn.

There was a gentleman from Chicago looking at some real estate here. Wonder what was the matter with "Gray's Lake?" A good many have expressed their desire to build there, but they think they will not receive just treatment, from what they see.

CHICAGO AMUSEMENTS.

McVICKERS THEATRE.—The revival, of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Nights Dream" at McVicker's has fully proven the wisdom of Manager McVicker's judgment in placing before the public only entertainments of the highest merit.

No greater popular success has ever been achieved in Chicago than that accorded the present production, all classes and all ages are alike delighted with the performance. Its spectacular effects are, to the average stage production of the days as a beautiful painting by a great artist in comparison to a cheap chromo.

The leading newspapers have been unanimous in their praise, and voice their approval in the most eulogistic comment from which we excerpt as follows:

The Times says: "Nothing seen i Chicago for years has deserved, for so many reasons, crowded houses every night.

The Tribune says: A beautiful entertainment, which reflects credit on the taste and liberality of the management.

The Inter-Ocean says: The representation is the most artistic ever presented on the American stage.

Secure your seats for ANY NIGHT, except Sunday, matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Dockstader's Minstrels. First time of the new and laughable political satire, ON THE FENCE.

Sunday, Aug. 11.—One week only, Rice's beautiful EVANGELINE, with a phenomenal cast.

HOOLEY'S THEATRE, which is in the hands of the decorators and furnishers will be opened on next Saturday evening, with Frank Daniels and his comedy company in "Little Puck," in which he made a great hit last season.

CHICAGO OPERA HOUSE—"The Crystal Slipper" began its ninth week at the Chicago Opera House Sunday evening. The "third edition" was presented to a house, as usual, crowded to the doors. Many improvements in what was really an excellent performance are noticeable. The ballets are entirely changed and new numbers introduced. The "march of the supper service" is now certainly the most unique and elaborate march ever seen on an American stage. There are nearly seventy participants, and the new armor is of the most gorgeous character. It is almost impossible to adequately describe the dazzling brilliancy of the "fan scene," in which this march takes place. Nearly two hundred persons, in costumes of the most artistic design, are grouped in a manner which shows that the piece is under the direction of a master hand in stage management. All the other added features—the new gavotte, the new dances, the new duets and the new songs—were received with applause. But three weeks more of the run of "The Crystal Slipper" at the Chicago Opera House remain to be filled.

—The drug store of Henry Pfeiffer, a Cedar Falls, was visited by the Sheriff and about $1,500 worth of liquor taken, among which were forty barrels of beer. Pfeiffer was selling under a permit, and was doing a wholesale as well as retail business. He proposes to resist the confiscation of the liquors in the courts, and will, it is said, plead the right to sell in original packages.

DYSPEPSIA

Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and drowsy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla." THOMAS COOK, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City.

Sick Headache

"For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all." MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headache. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used.

The Baltimore Manufacturers' Record corrects the error into which the Sun, of that city, as well as other papers fall, of drawing a gloomy picture of agriculture in the South. There is nothing gloomy about it. It has not suffered relatively as much as agriculture in other portions of the world, or of the United States. The prices of farm products have ruled low for some two or three years past, but the Southern farmers have suffered less than those of other sections; and they have certainly made great progress in their methods and their products.

The Record shows that their grain products have increased in about seventeen years to the enormous aggregate of 190,000,000 bushels. In 1870 the South produced 3,000,000 bales of cotton; in 1877 nearly 7,000,000 bales were produced. The corn crop in the South for 1870 was 249,000,000 bushels; in 1887 it was 402,000,000 bushels. In seventeen years the South's increase in wheat was 51 per cent., and in oats 155 per cent., and so on.

This is certainly encouraging enough, and yet this is but one feature of improvement. They have more than doubled their cotton crop in the last fifteen years, doubled their sugar crop, and increased in the same proportion all their other agricultural products. A section that has accomplished all this in the face of so many difficulties, and such a loss as the South suffered during and immediately after the war, can take no gloomy view of the present situation or of the future.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

French Basket Willows.

Some years ago as I made a trip through the Western States I saw many carp ponds, and I found out that many had the same trouble that I had with my ponds during the winter. The banks would freeze up and let the water through and make me lots of trouble. During the spring the high water would run over the banks and wash them off very badly. At one time I lost over three thousand young carp and sixty breeders from this cause. In the year 1885 I visited a large carp breeder. I saw that he had all his banks planted with French willows. He told me that he had always trouble with his banks around the ponds washing away badly till he had them planted with these willows.

In the spring of 1886 I visited this man again and bought one thousand cuttings. These I planted on the long bank of my carp pond No. 1. In the fall of 1886 I had one thousand shoots from four to six feet long. In the spring of 1887 I made five thousand cuttings out of them, and these I planted again about April 1st. During the summer of 1887 the willows that I planted first brought forth from four to six shoots from each root, and these grew about eight feet long. I expect to make the coming spring about fifty thousand cuttings. With these I shall plant a wet meadow. An acre of these willows is worth from $90 to $100. If you peel them yourself, then they are worth from $200 to $300 per acre.—D. N. Keru.

Savagely Attacked by Her Dog.

Frank Clark, foreman of the workshop at the jail, had until recently a fine large Newfoundland dog. A few days ago his master had occasion to whip him severely. After the punishment the dog walked into the room where Mr. Clark's wife sat sewing, and laying his head on the arm of her chair looked up into her face as though seeking for sympathy. Mrs. Clark looked at the animal and said something about his having received a whipping. No sooner were the words out of her mouth than the dog sprang fiercely at her and seized her nose in his teeth. Her husband was in the next room. She screamed for help, at the same time pushing the infuriated animal with all her strength. She succeeded in getting free, but as the teeth pulled away they tore down through her nose, nearly separating it from her face, and making an ugly wound. Mr. Clark rushed into the room. Taking in the situation he pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot the dog down in his tracks.—Bridgeport News.

They All Grew Weary.

Bill Nye's humor flags a little since the blizzard. Sooner or later most of the newspaper humorists play out. Doesticks, the "Fat Contributor," Mark Twain, "Peck's Bad Boy," all had their hey day of mirth and their decline. It is all right. The public will always find somebody to laugh at.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Spring Ditty.

April soon must pass away,
And oysters must depart with grace
For you will find no R in May,
But there are things to fill their place.
The merry, frisky fly will come
For speculation or for "speck"
The pensive skeeter soon will hum,
And tatur bugs will be on deck.

Pokomo Lassies.

Maple sap is now on tap
And "sugar bees" are all the go;
But maple lasses aren't more sweet
Than lassies sweet of Pokomo.

No Time to Lose.

Convalescent (to physician): "I see your bill, doctor, calls for ten dollars How much do you charge a visit?"

Physician: "Two dollars."

Convalescent: "But you only called three times."

Physician: "Five times, my friend, three times for treatment and twice for my money."

Convalescent: "I guess I had better hurry and pay up."—Epoch.

A Matrimonial Trust.

"May I ask you a question, Miss Dora?" he demanded, with a deep meaning in his voice.

"You may, Clarence, she replied wearily, but it'll be the same one you asked Lulu Caldone last week. It may interest you to know that Lulu and I are both in the Matrimonial Trust this year, and the combination is holding together so far.—Puck.

Notat all to His Credit.

"What are whisky straights?" asked Mrs. Scaggs of her husband.

"Whisky's most prominent trait," replied that worthy, "is the way it makes a man drunk."—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

THE MILWAUKEE HARVESTER AND BINDER IN THE LEAD.

The Milwaukee, although a new machine in this section of the country, has through several field trials proven itself to be the best machine.

On July 21st a field trial was held on the farm of Henry S. Dehne, to which trial seven machines were invited by the agent of the Milwaukee, as follows: The "Walter A. Wood," the "Deering," the "McCormick, the "Johnston," the "Osborne," the "Champion," and the "Piano." Of all these the last-named only, had courage to meet the "Milwaukee." All the others being scared out.

The "Milwaukee" did the best cutting and made the squarest bundle, thereby carrying the field. The second trial was held on the farm of T. A. Bernhardt, to which most of the above named machines were invited, but only the "Walter A. Wood" and "Osborne" came to be beaten and excelled in good work by the "Milwaukee."

The "Milwaukee" now stands in the lead, and can't be excelled in good work by any machine. Every agent of other machines have run down the "Milwaukee" as being too light to stand the test in long, heavy and lodged grain. And why have they done so?

Because they feel that this machine is going to hurt their future sales and take the lead everywhere in the market.

GRAPES FOR HEALTH.

The use of ripe grapes for dinner is of incalculable benefit to the human system, and the Pure Grape Juice, properly preserved, is invaluable for weakly persons and invalids. The Port Grape Wine and the Grape Juice preserved from his own vineyards, by Fred Speer of New Jersey, is pronounced by the leading medical experts to be the most reliable to be obtained. To use the Unfermented Grape Juice is just like eating the ripe sweet grape.

Have You Any Idea What It Costs

TO MAKE A CHICAGO DAILY NEWS?

You haven't? Well, let us give you just a glimpse into the business, perhaps it will interest you.

To begin with, the work of the paper is divided into Seventeen Different Departments, each under its own responsible Superintendent. Let us take them in order as they stand on the weekly pay-roll:—

1. The Editorial Department.—This includes managing editors, city editors, telegraph editors, exchange editors, editorial writers, special writers, and about thirty reporters. THE DAILY NEWS staff is admittedly without a superior in the West, and numbers 56
2. The Telegraph Room.—To save time special wires are run into THE DAILY NEWS building, and the paper's own operators take the messages and hand them immediately to the telegraph editor. The number of operators is 3
3. The Compositor's Room.—When "copy" has passed the hands of the proper revising editor it goes to the type-setter. There are a good many of him in THE DAILY NEWS office—on an average . . . 73
4. The Linotype Room.—But the compositor doesn't do all the type-setting. The "Linotype" machine "sets type" by casting a line-of-type, on somewhat the same principle as the type-founder casts a single type. Fourteen of these machines are in use in THE DAILY NEWS office, and the number of persons required in this department is 29
5. The Artists' and Engravers' Department.—But the metropolitan daily now gives its readers not only reading matter, but also illustrations. By the aid of good artists, zinc etchers and photography by electric light THE DAILY NEWS is now printing the best newspaper illustrations in America. This takes the best service of skilled workers to the number of 7
6. The Stereotype Foundry.—The matter—type and pictures—being now "locked up" in the "forms" the work is next transferred to the foundry. A metropolitan daily no longer prints from its type. In order to print a large edition quickly it is necessary to multiply the printing surfaces, and this is accomplished by casting duplicate stereotyped plates, from which, after they have been fastened to the presses, the printing is done. Of stereotypers THE DAILY NEWS requires 8
7. The Press Room.—THE DAILY NEWS uses six double perfecting presses, capable of printing 100,000 complete papers per hour. To run these there are required men to the number of 26
8. The Mailing and Delivery Department.—"The mailers" and the delivery clerks handle over a million papers a week. The force numbers 25
9. The Engine Room.—To supply the motive power requires three steam boilers of 175 horse-power capacity, and three engines with an aggregate of 270 horse-power. All departments are lighted by the Edison incandescent system, which here comprises three dynamo machines and 600 lamps. The employes of this department number 5
10. The Circulation Department.—The paper is now a manufactured article, and it is the business of this department to develop the market for it. The average number of workers is 16
11. The Subscription Room.—All the subscriptions from out-of-town, whether of individual readers or wholesale news agents, pass through this department, and this department employs on the average . . . 17
12. The Business Office.—The general clerical work of the paper, such as receiving and caring for the advertisements—of which over fifteen hundred are received and handled every day—receiving and paying out cash, the general bookkeeping of the business, requires a counting-room force of 27
13. The Care of Building requires the constant service of three janitors 3
14. The Watchman.—To insure perfect protection against risk of fire two watchmen are constantly on duty. 2
15. The New York Office.—This engages the entire time of a general manager and assistant 2
16. The Washington Bureau.—In charge of its own special Washington staff correspondent 1
17. The Milwaukee Bureau.—To facilitate Northwestern news gathering, one man 1

From which it appears that the number of regular employees is 302

And the pay roll runs from $5,500 to $6,000 per week, aggregating during the year $300,000.

Then there is even a larger annual expenditure for white paper, and telegraph and cable tolls sometimes run nearly a thousand dollars a week. Take it all together the expenditures of THE DAILY NEWS for the year 1888 will vary very little from $900,000.

The foregoing takes no account of the special correspondents at hundreds of places throughout the country; of European correspondents; of fifteen hundred news agents throughout the Northwest who distribute THE DAILY NEWS to its out of town readers; of two hundred city carriers; of forty-two wholesale city dealers with their horses and wagons; of one hundred and fifty branch advertisement offices throughout the city, all connected with the main office by telephone, nor of the about three thousand newsboys who make a living, in whole or in part, selling THE DAILY NEWS in Chicago. This is what it costs the publisher to make a CHICAGO DAILY NEWS. It costs the reader to buy it one cent a day. Measured by the cost of its production, THE DAILY NEWS is worth its price, isn't it? The Chicago Daily News is sold by all newsdealers, or will be mailed, postage paid, for $3.00 per year, or 25 cents per month. NO OTHER Railway in the Northwest.

has in so short a period gained the reputation and popularity enjoyed by the WISCONSIN CENTRAL LINE. From a comparatively unknown factor in the commercial world, it has been transformed to an independent, influential, grand Through Route, with magnificent depots, superb equipment and unsurpassed terminal facilities. Through careful catering to details, it has won for itself a reputation for solidity, safety, convenience and attention to its patrons, second to no railroad in the country. Pullman sleepers, models of palatial comfort, dining cars in which the cuisine and general appointments are up to the highest standard, and coaches especially built for this route, are among the chief elements which have contributed towards catering successfully to a discriminating public. Located directly on its line, between Chicago and Milwaukee, and St. Paul and Minneapolis, and Chicago and Ashland and Duluth, are the following thriving cities of Wisconsin and Michigan: Burlington, Waukesha, Fon du Lac, Oshkosh, Neenah, Menasha, Stevens Point, Chippewa Falls, Eau Claire, New Richmond, Hurley, Wis., Ironwood, Mich., and Bessemer, Mich.

SUNSET ON THE LAGUNE AT VENICE.

BY MARION V. DUDLEY.

Venice ablaze in the sunset splendor!
Purple clouds with their crests unfound;
Chiming bells with tones so tender,
Hearts are broken and lost in sound.

Glorious sails and a prow resplendent;
Paradise bird with its wings unfurled!
Golden masts and a banner pendant,
Haughty dream of the orient world!

Roseate plume to the zenith sweeping,
Flung by hope to a new desire!
Hues as strong as a flame upleaping
Stir the soul and feed its fire.

Lion proud as Venetian story,
Not for you shall the dark bronze fly;
Stand with domes that have seen your glory;
Kneel to pinions that cleave the sky;

Touch of the Past on a warm pulse beating,
Ear of the Present listening low;
Brow of the Future bend your greeting,
Down from opaline heights of snow!

Some sweet hush in the sunset's chrism
Leans to rock my life barque lone,
Violet chimes that scorn their prison
Sing in color and paint in tone!

Not for the grave of a fair dream ended
Keys are tuned and rich chords strung;
But for the life where dawn has blended
Mortal peace in her songs unsung.

Hark! a voice through the arches ringing,
Deep with pathos, rich with time,
Lifts the soul on a tide of singing,—
Fills the heart with a faith sublime.

Triumph voice, in your full-souled passion!
Sing for the centuries yet to be;
Never a Doge in his cold ambition
Wore such ermine as mantles thee;

Softer now the tangled chiming,
Amethyst splendors deepening grave;
Boat of oar and doves' wings rhyming
Cleave the purple and dip the wave;

Islands lost in the shade enfolding;
Starlit to a silvery gleam;
Mystery comes, her birthright holdings;

Mickey Finn's Raft.

Rain had been falling steadily for more than a week. Sometimes it came down in sheets, and again it fell in a slow drizzling mist which gave a depressed look to the landscape. The trees in Lindsley's wood dripped rain and the two streams which fed Brown's pond were changed from trickling silver rivulets into roaring, muddy torrents, tearing madly along between their banks.

Mickey Finn's tame crow refused to go out of doors, even when urged to do so by Mrs. Finn's broom, but sat moping and croaking hoarsely under the the stove. The three little yellow goslings peeped plaintively and hid under the doorstep, but the belligerent billy goat came out of his barrel and stood in the rain, as though in defiance of the elements. Mrs. Finn remarked one day that she hoped he would get the 'new monya," which remark her son thought uncalled for and unnecessarily severe.

Whether the flood at Cooney Island suggested it, or whether it was a deliberate attempt to inculcate a little Biblical as well as profane history into the minds of his pupils, is a matter of no importance. At any rate Mr. Flaherty, the pompous and superficial teacher of the little red school house under the hill, read the story of the deluge to his pupils one afternoon, among whom was Mickey Finn.

Little Mike was profoundly impressed with the story. As he was an imaginative boy, he lay in his little trundle bed at night listening to the patter of the rain upon the roof, and saw in fancy that great ungainly ark floating upon the waters. He pictured to himself Shem, Ham and Japhet peering anxiously out of the windows in search of the land, and to the ears of his fancy came the bleating of a nanny goat and the lowing of a cow.

It happened that the teacher said nothing to his scholars about the bow set in the heaven as a sign that there should be no more flood, and so Mickey reasoning that the earth and especially Cooney Island, was to be inundated, began to think about some means of deliverance. So troubled did he become over the momentus question that his mother noticed his abstraction. She feared that her boy was going to be ill. Still the thought of how to save his mother and father and the animals from the threatened destruction stuck to him like a burdock. At last, after hearing from Jack Doolan some incidents in the adventurous life of Robinson Crusoe, an idea came to him. He would build a raft!

"I can make it out o' the rails in th' Stumpy Field fince," said he to himself. The idea tickled him so much that he began dancing a jig in his mother's newly-scrubbed kitchen, and she boxed his ears and sent him down cellar to chop some wood. Here he confided his scheme to the nanny goat with an admonitory shake of the head that she was not to tell "any wan, not even th' billy." He would be sure to save her and the three goslings, but the crow could take care of himself, bekase he had wings."

Mickey decided to keep his scheme a profound secret from everyone; not even Jack Doolan was to know it until the raft had been completed and the flood began to come in at the kitchen door.

Although little Mike was possessed of more of the resources of civilization than fell to the lot of Mr. Noah, the ark builder, still he was hampered by the necessity for secrecy. And so three days passed before the raft was finished. Mickey mesured the raft with a top cord and found it to be two cubits in length and one cubit and a span in width, although he did not figure according to Hebrew methods.

So pleased was Mickey with the success of his undertaking that it was only by the most herculean efforts that he restrained the secret within his bosom. There were his parents, unconscious of coming danger, and he had the means of saving them from a terrible fate. The only relief he had was daily communion with the billy goat.

"Now billy," he would say, "ye needn't be afeerd. Faix, thare's room on th' rait fur you an' yer wife. If ye'll only kape still an' not be buckin' you'll not be drowned like thim other billy goats."

At last the day memorable in the annals of Cooney Island came. The dawn was murky and gloomy. Little Mike arose with the sun and dropped softly out of the window. He was about to test the raft to see if it was pond-worthy. He first took the billy down to the pond and tied him to a bush. The nanny followed. The goslings were safely stowed away in the boy's pockets, where they kept up an unavailing peeping against the close confinement. The dog went along without any urging. The billy, the nanny, and the dog each had a corner of the raft to itself, while the goslings were granted the freedom of the deck. The raft was propelled by a long pole. Out into the muddy waters of the pond Mickey urged the raft, while the crow flew around in wide circles overhead. The raft floated and behaved beautifully. It rode the troubled waters like Mrs. McGee's drake. The floating domestic menagerie was getting along swimmingly until that notorious gossip, Mrs. Murphy, looked out of the kitchen window and saw the raft. She uttered a yell of terror and exclaimed:

"God save us! there's that larrup Finn floatin' around on a big id goats an' dogs; an' phwat's le yaller things on th' boord? but thare's goslings! Run, n' tell his mother."

than five minutes all the residthe island were on the margin nd, including the older Finns. Mrs. F n was in a paroxysm of fear lest her son should be drowned, while her hu and contented himself with ing a stout hickory stick in Mickey direction and threatened to use it i he did not "stheer th' boat ashore."

In the meantimo the sluice gate of the pond had been lifted in order to relieve the dam of too much pressure. The raft swung around into the current made by the sucking sluice gate. The dog began to howl and tug at his cord. The goslings ran hither and thither upon the raft, and their feeble peeping wrung Mrs. Finn's heart with anguish.

"Ah! worra, worra! me goslin's'll go down th' mill race!"

All the time Mickey was working with all his might with the pole, and at last succeeded in getting the raft out of the current. Encouraged by his mother's pleadings, and frightened by his father's threats, he poled the raft toward the shore on which his parents were standing. The water was falling rapidly, and the raft caught upon a post. Before little Mike could release his ark from its precarious position it began to cant alarmingly. The dog became alarmed, and breaking loose, sought refuge near the billy. This old veteran, who, through all the excitement had preserved his equanimity resented the dog's intrusion on his territory and bowled him into the pond. This roused Mrs. Finn to a paroxysm of rage. She shook her fist in the direction of the billy and shouted hoarsely while the rain beat down on her unprotected head;

"Wait till ye come ashore, me laddy buck, wid yer wicked horns! Won't I fix ye, though! Won't I bate your head in wid me fist!"

By this time a clothes line had been procured and the raft showed signs of breaking up.

Mr. Finn was becoming alarmed for the safety of his boy, and he cried out, as he whirled the clothes line around his head:

"Now, Mickey, grab hold 'o this an' we'll pull ye ashore. Niver moind th' animils!"

But our hero was made of more horloc stuff than to desert his menagerie. He tied the rope around the nanny's body and she was drawn by a dozen willing hands, kicking and splashing through the water. Here the rope flew through the air again and little Mike proceeded to lasso the billy. To this the billy had pronounced objections. Despite his struggles, however, the rope was secured around his horns, and with a "heave ho altogether!" the angered animal was jerked into the water and towed ignominiously ashore. He landed dripping, but mad as a hornet. The crowd parted respectfully to let him go through, but Mrs. Finn, forgetful of her usual caution, ran up to the goat and shook her fist before his glowing eyes. There was a cry of alarm from the crowd, a commingling of laughter and cries of terror, a glimpse of flying skirts and a rampant object with wavery horns and a dripping beard. Then the skirts disappeared over the hill, and the "divil wid wicked horns" faded away into a dim speck against the eastern horizon in grim pursuit.

Mickey put the goslings in his pocket, secured a board from the raft, which was fast breaking up, and swam ashore. His father received him warmly. In fact, so hearty and unrestrained was his welcome that Mr. Finn's horny hand were stung by the force of his punishment. There was a time when Mickey would have cried at such treatment from the hands of his father, but that time had now gone by. Secure in the rectitude of his own motives he bore this little misunderstanding with fortitude and wended his way homeward. He found the door closed and the billy standing guard. After securing this intractable animal the kitchen door was opened by his mother. Little Mike then hung his wet clothing before the fire to dry. As the steam began to rise from the wet garments there were signs of animation in the trousers, the pockets bulged, and a plaintive peeping arose in the kitchen. Mickey raised himself in his trundle bed—he had only one suit of clothes—and listened. Then he jumped to his feet and ran into the kitchen wrapped in a quilt.

"Faix," said he, with a quiet grin, "I forgot t' take the yaller goslin's out o' me pockets!"

An Important Question Answered.

Gentlemen—I find it extremely difficult to keep my underskirt from crawling up my back and would be obliged to you for a formula that will overcome this trouble.
B. JOSEPH HOMER.

You have neglected to forward a diagram of your back and particulars as to the style, material and general construction of the garment in question. We are, therefore, somewhat at a loss what to say to you. The complaint from which you suffer is very prevalent. Perhaps your shirt does not fit; perhaps you don't know how to put it on and tuck it in to the best advantage. There is a right and a wrong way of doing things, even to the putting on of an undershirt. In the absence of certain particulars which you have not sent us we would recommend in an off-hand and superficial fashion that when over you feel the garment preparing to wander up your spine you sit down suddenly and continue sitting till you are convinced that the shirt has become too tired out to attempt any more climbing that day. You may in time, sir, by persistency, train your shirt into a proper recognition of its subordination. Once give an undershirt to understand that you are "boss" and will not tolerate its presuming to make a play ground of your back, and our word for it you will be happy all day long.—Howard Lampoon.

Napoleon's Knife.

The following imperial implement is owned by John G. Witte, of New York: "The knife was presented to the first Napoleon in the city of Paris. He carried it in his traveling satchel, and in the flight from Russia in 1812 it was lost. In the year 1814 it was sold at Rotterdam to a planter of the island of Java. It remained in his family, when he was presented to me as a testimonial of appreciation of some favors that I had done. The knife is a superb specimen of the cutler's art. It weighs nearly a pound, and the casket in which it reposes is quite as big as those used for meerschaum pipes. It contains, besides four blades, sixteen instruments, among them a small saw, a button-hook, a gimlet, a corkscrew, an awl, two lances, one for puncturing and the other for cutting, and a pair of scissors. The rim and bolster of the knife are of solid gold. The hauts are pearl, adorned with the imperial arms in gold, surmounted by the Napoleonic N."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A Wife's Anxiety.

Tough Yarns.

One of our subscribers has kindly furnished us with some clippings from the daily press of her neighborhood and one of them has the startling heading: "Satan Incarnate; an infant with Horns, Hoofs, Claws, and Tail." Then follows about a half column report of a curious birth occurring at Newburg, Ohio, and quite a minute description of the curious monster. The whole account was so overdrawn that we took the trouble to write to the postmaster of the place and ask him if there was any basis whatever for this newspaper story. We were not surprised to learn from him that it was all a humbug. It seems unfortunate that we must read our newspapers with the feeling that we cannot place much reliance upon what we find in them. Ordinary events are twisted, distorted, and overdrawn for the purpose of creating a sensation, but we may take it for granted that ninety-nine out of one hundred of these very queer stories are entirely the emanations of some lively imagination. It would be a queer world if all these stories were true that get the run of the papers. There are, indeed, a great many wonderful things in this world and many curious happenings every day, but probably the most wonderful thing of all, is the lively imagination which guides the pen of these newspaper fakirs.—Dr. Foote's Health Month'y.

Sir Richard Burton's Lively Family.

Col. Burton, the father of Richard, entered the army at 17, and later in life, and after he had married, found it expedient to live abroad. His children, Richard, Edward, and a sister, brought up on the Continent, learned several languages almost as a matter of course; and the boys acquired a cosmopolitan tone which never left them. They seem to have been hardy and light spirited children, who, despite a liberal use of the paternal cane did pretty much as they pleased. "They beat all their bonnes, generally by running at their petticoats and upsetting them." One servant, a big Norman girl, insisting on stricter discipline, was soon conquered. "A jerk of the arm on her part brought on a general attack from the blood; the poor bonne measured her length upon the ground and they jumped upon her." One day their mother took them to the window of a pastry-cook's and, by way of lesson pointing out to some apple-puffs, said: "Now, let us go, it is good for little children to restrain themselves.' Upon this the three devilets turned flashing eyes and burning cheeks upon their moralizing mother, broke the windows with their fists, and clawed out the tray of apple puffs, and bolted, leaving poor Mrs. Burton, a sadder and wiser woman to pay the damage of her lawless brood's proceedings." None will be surprised to read, further on, that Edward, who went to Cambridge, was sent away because he flatly refused to rise in time to attend morning chapel; and that Richard was rusticated from Oxford because he would drive tandem to a forbidden steeple-chase. At the same time it should be said that both the boys will fully disobey in order that they might enter on active life as soldiers.—London Spectator.

How She Went to Bed.

She was alone and a passenger on the Chicago Express which left the Grand Central Depot at 6 P. M., says a New York Sun writer. Her quality was not made apparent until within fifty miles of Albany. Then it became evident that she regarded comfort as superior to the proprieties every time. Her berth being prepared, with a look of quiet determination, she stood up and drew the curtain behind her, not close enough, however, to embarrass her movements. Off came her waist; then she stepped out of her dress skirt, and, folding both neatly, stowed them away. Next, her corset came off. Then she pinned a shawl about her shoulders, threw aside the curtain and came forth. Reaching her bag she secured her brush, comb, hand-glass and proceeded coolly to arrange her hair as was her wont in her own boudoir. Thus far the men in the car had done their duty by looking the other way; but they gave it up when she deliberately took out all her hairpins, removed an elaborate switch, attached it to the hook at the side of the berth and combed it out carefully. This done, she folded it up, put it away, got into bed, took off the shawl, and in ten minutes was softly snoring. Then the men went into their own compartment, lighted fresh cigars, passed round a flask and wondered who might be the unfortunate possessor of such a woman.

An Effective Sermon.

The rainy Sundays lately have had rather a demoralizing effect on the church congregations, but one Portland minister does not let this discourage him, having in mind a story that Dr. Payson of this city used to tell. One very stormy Sunday he went to church more from habit than because he expected to find somebody there. Just after he had stepped inside the door an old negro came in, and asked if Dr. Payson was to preach there that day, explaining that he was a stranger in town, and had been advised to go to his church. "Upon that," said Dr. Payson, "I made up my mind to preach my sermon if nobody else came." Nobody else did come, so the doctor preached to the choir and the old negro. Some months afterward he happened to meet the negro, and stopping him asked how he enjoyed the sermon that stormy Sunday. "Enjoy dat sermon," replied the old man, "I 'clar, doctor, I nebber heerd a better one. Yo' see I had a seat pretty well up front, an' whenebber you'd say somethin's pretty hard like 'gin de sins of men I'd jess look roun' ter see who you's a hittin', and I wouldn't see nobody on'y jess me. Hats, Etc.

The social system bids fair to be overturned by so trifling a thing as a woman's hat, unless the legislature or some other august assemblage comes to the rescue with an exactment placing a limit on the height to which this wonderful creation may be reared. For years has this step-ladder order of millinery thrust its towering head in the face of an indignant yet admiring male public. It has given to short women a dignity of carriage which should belong only to the tall, and to tall women a superiority which no mere high silk hat could hope to reach. It has led to a revolution in the manufacture of hat boxes, to embarrassment and profanity in the theatre and to sundry other evil results which rejected not at all on the wearer of the bonnet, but considerably on those by whom she might be surrounded. At length, however, the Nemesis of millinery is overtaking the women of fashion themselves, and since they suffer there is faint hope of delivery next season.

A hat model is of the most delicate French gray straw, trimmed with a garland of violets, tied on with white moire and velvet ribbons.

The old Neapolitan straws, woven of horse hair, and revived and twisted and folded with toques as if the braid were nothing but a bit of cloth. When the sides are tied up with black velvet they are very effective, with no other trimming than this and a bunch of lilacs.

But to the all-important gown. Crepe Raphael is a new material which drapes exquisitely, and some of the gray shades with white flowers printed on them are beautiful over any white petticoat. There is an arrangement of drapery that shows the underskirt (often of a different fabric and color) in the most unexpected place in very patchy effects, which should be carefully avoided. It could have been designed by no one with an artistic sense of folds. An instance of this is where two pieces of drapery are folded across one bit, and a V-shaped piece of the petticoat shows. Lest any one should adopt the style I would prevent it by saying that nothing can give a gown a more home-made appearance.

The disposition of drapery is a study, and deserves the personal attention of each woman.

No dressmaker will study the figure with that degree of earnestness that a woman will her own, and, therefore, those who rely wholly on the dressmaker are not as well dressed as those who think themselves.

Seventy-Sixth Ohio Infantry.

The Seventy-Sixth Ohio Infantry was organized at Newark, Ohio, Feb. 9, 1862. Its colonel was Charles H. Woods, who had been a captain in the Ninth United States Infantry. It was immediately sent forward, and its first experience of fighting was in the attack on Fort Donelson. It was also in the front in the bloody battle of Shiloh. It took part in the advance on Corinth, in June was sent to Memphis, and in July to Helena, Ark. It took part in several raids into the enemy's country, during which it had considerable skirmishing, and in December shared in the unfortunate Yazoo expedition. It was in the expedition against Arkansas Post, and in April moved with Grant's army southward, to execute the flank movement against Vicksburg. At Jackson it made a gallant charge on the enemy's works. Before Vicksburg it did heroic work in the trenches. After the surrender it went with Sherman's army to capture Jackson. In September the regiment went to Memphis, in November was sent to join General Hooker, arriving in time to take part in both the fights on Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge. It went into winter quarters at Point Rock, Ala., Jan. 1, and there nearly all of the regiment re-enlisted. The soldiers were then allowed veteran furlough, and in March rejoined the army. It immediately took up the line of march southward with Sheridan, sharing in all the battles of the Atlanta Campaign. After the surrender, the regiment performed provost guard until Jan. 9, when it embarked on gunboats for Beaufort, S. C. From here, after a little delay, it started northward on the "Campaign of the Carolinas." It was at the capture of Columbia, and at the fight at Bentonville, and thence went to Raleigh, where it remained until Johnston's surrender. It went to Washington in May to take part in the grand review, then returned to Columbus, Ohio, and was there discharged July 24, 1865.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Society Butterfly.

In Washington "sassiety" they become very gorgeous once in awhile. Just gaze on this costume, the same being the forgery worn by the wife of Minister Romero, the Mexican representative at Washington, at a ball recently:

Mme. Romero wore a French gown of Ivory white satin; the bodice was cut high in the back and square in front, and was richly trimmed with crystal bead passamenterie, with pearl pendants; exquisite point lace trimmed the neck and filled the elbow sleeves. A side panel on the trained skirt was of net with the meshes finely wrought in gold thread, and embroidered with silk crystals and milk-white beads, and having large pendants of pearls over the satin plaiting at the foot. The back fell in a long, full train.

Milan straw and French chip are very fashionable, but Neopolitan is seen again after many years retirement and fancy braids of all kinds appear in hats and bonnets.

A VERY LUCKY MAN

Jacob Pohley Wins.

"Is this Mr. Pohley?"

"I think I am Mr. Pohley. There isn't really any doubt of it in my mind, but until a week ago I was only Jacob Pohley, and the change to 'Mister' is a trifle sudden. Everybody who has read of my good fortune calls me 'Mister.' I suppose you are a reporter?"

"Yes. Tell me of your good luck."

"Well, I bought a couple of coupons for The Louisiana State Lottery from a man on the street and they were loaded—loaded right to the muzzle."

"How much did you catch?"

"Just $30,000!" and Mr. Pohley toyed carelessly with his watch chain, giving the reporter a chance to recover his breath. "That was all—just $30,000." He emphasized the "just" and repeated the figures with great satisfaction.

"Have you received your $30,000?"

"Yes, indeed; and it isn't going to get very far away from me. I'm going to put it into real estate. Very likely I will continue my present business of cigar solicitor. I'll give my four children a good education, and my wife, who is very much excited and greatly pleased over my good fortune, will have a much better time now. I have been buying tickets for some time in the Louisiana State Lottery, and 'caught on' once before, but not to the extent of just $30,000.

Mr. Pohley has a very pleasant home on San Pablo avenue, Berkeley, and his neighbors rejoice in his good luck.—San Francisco (Cal.) Chronicle, July 28.

GO HEAL THYSELF

In the Waters of West Baden and French Lick Springs.

These springs are located in Orange county, Indiana, 80 miles northwest from Louisville on the O., W. B. & F. L. S. Branch of the Monon Route—Louisville, New Albany & Chicago Railway.

No springs on this continent, as yet analyzed, afford more than a fourth part of the quality of sulphureted hydrogen, and very few in any part of the world even approach them in this particular.

All these waters have about the same general medicinal effect. They are alterative and tonic when moderately used; in larger quantities, are powerful eliminators, acting upon the bowels, kidneys and skin, without, however, producing the irritating effect which this class of agents usually induces when prepared by means of pharmacy, less perfect than Nature. They are especially adapted to the treatment of diseases of the skin, dyspepsia, constipation, chronic inflammation of the various mucous surfaces, scrofula, rheumatism, all specific diseases; and, in fine, may be very beneficially used in all chronic affections where a tonic and alterative effect is designed.

To the invalid the many cures effected by the proper use of these waters for the last thirty years give the strongest assurance of relief. To those who are not yet confirmed invalids the old maxim that "an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure" conveys its own suggestion.

To those residents of cities harassed with care and oppressed with the heat, dust and impure air, who seek complete quietness and repose, French Lick and West Baden offer all that natural scenery, pure air and home-like comforts can contribute.

The West Baden Springs property contains nearly seven hundred acres in delightfully varied landscape of prairie and forest, extending restful recreation to the wearied invalid or tourist. Every improvement known to modern Sanitarium Resorts has added for the convenience and accommodation of guests, including good music. The Hotel, Bath Houses and Grounds are lighted by Electricity, Tanks and Baths tempered by steam, etc. The Springs are located in a charming valley, the medicated water bubbling up into circular basins of native white stone rock, thus retaining all its natural gas and efficacy.

The French Lick Springs issue in a beautiful valley surrounded by an undulated, picturesque region. The water of the Springs flows from rock-lined apertures and is enclosed by some easements. Its temperature is uniformly 55° summer and winter. All buildings and grounds lighted with Incandescent Electric Light. New Bath Houses have been erected with improved medical facilities in connection with steam. A band of music is in regular attendance.

Lost River and Lick Creek afford opportunities for the lover of the rod to indulge in his favorite pastime.

No tedious stage ride, the steel tracks of the Monon Route are laid to the springs, and first-class trains running regularly.

You can purchase through tickets of any agent to French Lick and West Baden Springs' stations.

For descriptive pamphlets containing analysis of the waters, address any agent of the Monon Route.

Quickest Courtship on Record.

Philadelphia Times: A certain young lady went out last Wednesday morning to make some calls. On her way she met a friend who suggested that she should go to the matinee with him. She accepted the invitation and he bought the tickets. At the end of the first act he proposed to her. She refused, thinking he was only joking. When the curtain went down for the second act he renewed the proposal, and so earnestly that she asked time to consider it, which was willingly given. No sooner was the third act finished than she softly murmured, "Yes." After the matinee was over the engaged couple hailed a passing street car and crossed to Camden, where they were married. The whole occupied three hours and fifty minutes.

Short Hand and Type Writing.

Of the many inventions of this century, perhaps there is none that aids the business man more, or opens a larger field of labor for young people than Short-hand and Type-writing. The work is light, hours short, and pay ample. Of the many institutions for instructing in these branches, the largest known is the Metropolitan Business College, 79 Madison Street, Chicago. The system taught is modern, instruction individual, term short, and the great advantage in attending this institution is evident from the fact that several hundred students are annually placed in paying positions.

All Run Down
From the weakening effects of warm weather, by hard work, or from a long illness, you need a good tonic and blood purifier. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives a good appetite, strengthens the whole system, purifies the blood, regulates the digestion.

"It affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. My health two years ago was very poor. My friends thought I was going with consumption. I commenced using Hood's Sarsaparilla, took five bottles of it, and to-day I can do as hard a day's work as I ever could. It saved me from the grave and put me on my feet a sound, healthy man." WILL H. D. THERRY, 144 East Main Street, Wiggonsville, Ohio.
